Thanks to your support, Angela faces her future with hope...

When Angela's partner Paul proposed on her 42nd birthday, life was good for their whole family. They could never have predicted that ovarian cancer would be the catalyst for setting a wedding date.

"When you hear cancer, it just hits you. And you walk out, and you can't even really breathe," Angela said.

"And then it's, ok, you're going to have to have surgery and every moment, you're at home and you're Googling. And then you're seeing how long... how long you could have to live," she said.

Angela's stomach had swollen quite suddenly during a camping trip, but a bout of COVID for the family soon followed before she could finally get to the doctor.

An ultrasound soon revealed a 16-centimetre mass on one of her ovaries and Angela was told the devastating news that she had ovarian cancer.

As she lay prepped and ready for surgery just a few weeks later, nothing went to plan. After several hours of testing, her surgery was eventually cancelled as her sodium levels had dropped so low, she could have died on the table.

"That was probably one of the hardest days because I didn't have Paul there to calm me down—you're sort of just lying on the table, looking at the roof, looking at the lights, having doctors, nurses coming in and out and you're just waiting." Angela remembers.

It took four days in a hospital ward before her sodium levels were high enough to start the process again.

Incredibly, Angela was well enough to walk down the aisle unaided just three weeks after surgery, wearing a dress she'd picked up on the way just the day before.

There was no chance of a honeymoon—12 weeks of gruelling chemotherapy began just days later, with her new husband Paul by her side every step of the way.

More than a year after her final round however, Angela's scans are all clear, and the pair are looking forward to the next chapter of married life, free of cancer!

By purchasing Cars for Cancer tickets, you are helping to fuel vital cancer research, giving patients like Angela the hope of a brighter future. Thank you.

Congratulations to the winner of CFC 113!
